5 Attention mechanisms

- the optic nerve of our visual system receives massive sensory input, far exceeding what the brain can fully process
- fortunately, not all stimuli are equal
- focalization and concentration of consciousness have enabled us to direct attention to objects of interest, such as preys and predators, in the complex visual environment
- the ability of paying attention to only a small fraction of the information has evolutionary significance, allowing human beings to live and succeed